

Ring of Fire?

March 13, 2013

Today was interesting to say the least. Mrs. Overman was out, so I had to teach all of the classes, which was tough. Middle school students are SO different from high school students in all ways. The kids are great though, and they are responding really well to me. I'm just getting to know them, but they seemed really impressed that I knew all of their names!

Overall, I think the entire day went really well. We got through the material and had great discussions. I'm connecting with a few of the students and using them to get some more classroom interactions.

I think I'm going to like it here.
